

Position available in Constitutional law

Sciences Po's School of Law is seeking to recruit a full professor in "comparative and global constitutional law, theory of law" for a public-sector teaching position.

The successful applicant will be required to teach in the School of Law and the Sciences Po undergraduate program. He/she will pursue his/her individual research activities as part of the School of Law's research team, in the field of comparative constitutional law and theory of law.

Applicants must provide proof of substantial research activity at an internationally recognized level of excellence in the field of constitutional law, and more particularly comparative and global constitutional law, theory of law and, if possible, the history of legal ideas. They must be open to multidisciplinary approaches to the law and will have demonstrated a capacity to coordinate research with academics in fields other than law. The originality and anticipated scope of the research project and the methods employed will be an important criterion of selection.

Applicants must have solid experience in teaching and will have demonstrated a capacity for innovative teaching methods. They must be able to teach in English.

This is a public-sector position and civil-service posting. The successful applicant will have the status of professor of public law (section 02 of the Conseil national des universités - CNU).

The application must consist of:

- a cover letter explaining reasons for applying;
- a detailed CV with a complete list of the candidate's research work;
- a short CV;
- two examples of the candidate's main research work demonstrating his/her aptitude for fundamental and multidisciplinary research.

A selection committee will examine these documents in accordance with the provisions of French law no. 2007-1199 of 10 August 2007 relating to public-sector teaching positions.
